ONLINE WEBINAR: AGEISM AND TECHNOLOGY

Betty Wanyu, Hanna Köttl, Ittay Mannheim

More than ever, access and ability to use digital or health care technology, such as e-banking, online-shopping or e-health applications, are crucial to engage and participate in many everyday life activities. Older persons are often stereotypically portrayed as technophobic, less capable and unwilling to use new digital technology. This webinar discusses the role of ageism and self-ageism as potential barriers to access and adopt new technology and suggests implications for technology design, life-long learning and policy to decrease ageism in the context of technology.
